SADDENED PRESIDENT JOHNSON RIDES TO TAKE UP NEW DUTIES AS CHIEF EXECUTIVE

A SAD NATION AND WORLD MOURN THE LOSS OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY

Johnson Asks Help of God, Country,

Takes Over Tasks as U.S. President

WASHINGTON (AP)—Asking God's help, Lyndon B. Johnson gathered up the monumental problems of the presidency today as the world, the nation and his family mourned John F. Kennedy, dead by an assassin's bullets.

"I will do my best—that's all I can do. I ask for your help and God's," said the new President.

Flanked by a Texas congressman and a long-time associate, Johnson strode across West Executive Avenue from the White House to the Executive Office

Johnson, his face pale and drawn, went to work on his first full day as Chief Executive today in the office he used as vice president.

He left the White House, just across a narrow street, to the body of John F. Kennedy—a focus of a nation's mourning for its assassinated leader.

Rep. Homer Thornberry, D-Tex., and William Moyers, Deputy Director of the Peace Corps and a former Johnson aide, walked with him.

The 36th President managed a building at 9:29 a.m.

There he went into conference with Secretary of State Dean Rusk who arrived a few minutes earlier.

The new President wore a black suit and a black necktie with a single yellow stripe across it.

Rep. Homer Thornberry, D-Tex., and William Moyers, Deputy Director of the Peace Corps and a former Johnson aide, walked with him.

The 36th President managed a nod and a "good morning" for newsmen and a White House doorkeeper.

That was all.

He came to the White House at 8:55 a.m., and spent more than a half hour there before going to his old office.

Shortly after Johnson arrived Director John McCone of the Central Intelligence Agency entered the White House, presumably to see the new chief executive.

With McCone was McGeorge

Bundy, special assistant on national security affairs to the slain Kennedy.

For all the new President's obvious shock and sorrow it was a business day devoted to the awesome task of picking up the reins Kennedy dropped when a sniper's bullet struck him down.

Johnson was at it before 9 a.m. EST, in the tempo set by his first order as chief executive—"Now let's get airborne."

The "get airborne" directive was Johnson's first move after he was sworn in aboard the presidential jet airplane at Dallas almost beside the body of the man he was succeeding.

And he kept the pace going Friday night with a series of conferences here after flying back.

Also on Johnson's schedule was a Saturday conference with Dwight D. Eisenhower, the 34th president.

At midafternoon the new President was to meet with his Cabinet.

On arrival in Washington Friday night from Dallas, scene of the tragedy, Johnson had told the American people: "I will do my best. That is all I can do. I ask for your help, and God's."

Then he conferred with several Cabinet members and with congressional leaders of both parties. The word went out that these leaders had given him hearty assurances of bipartisan support.

Only a few hours before Johnson had taken the presidential oath in a jet plane standing on a Dallas runway, ready to depart for Washington. It was a heart-tugging ceremony witnessed by the newly widowed Jacqueline Kennedy, her clothing still stained from her husband's blood.

Johnson was riding two cars behind the President in the cavalcade through Dallas streets when the shots came from ambush, taking the life of the chief executive and wounding Gov. John B. Connally of Texas.

Connally was wounded in the gunfire which killed Kennedy Friday.

Dallas Police Chief Jesse Curry said today Lee Harvey Oswald had "readily admitted he is a Communist."

me it is a deep personal tragedy.

I know the world shares the sorrow that Mrs. Kennedy and her family bear.

"I will do my best. That is all I can do. I ask for your help and God's."

Then he walked to a big green helicopter which took off for the White House.

Landing on the White House south lawn, the new President took his wife's arm, walked slowly across the lawn and the rose garden. As he went he conferred with Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and McGeorge Bundy, presidential assistant for national security.

Then, at the French doors to the oval office of the president, he paused a moment and walked through alone, stepping across a historic threshold to massive responsibilities.

It was stunning, almost unbelievable news that flashed around the country and to the far reaches of the world.

Expressions of grief, sorrow, surprise poured in from friends and antagonists, allies and foes, from the Kremlin and from the Vatican.

For Johnson, the problems were just beginning.

By moving into the White House he also assumes leadership of the West in the cold war—and faces the major question of whether Soviet Premier Khrushchev will stir up a new crisis to test the mettle of the new American chief executive.

Death news spreads

Ypsilanti is in mourning for its martyred President.

Mayor John Calder this morning asked all business establishments to close between noon and 3 p.m. Monday in respect for Mr. Kennedy, and Glenn M. Dusibier and Robert K. Fashbaugh, co-chairmen of Ypsilanti Chamber of Commerce Retail Committee, said Ypsilanti stores would comply.

Arborland stores will close from noon to 2 p.m.

A spot check of other area merchants this afternoon indicated some were undecided on how to observe the President's funeral on Monday and if, or how long their stores would be closed.

City offices will be closed as will those in Ypsilanti Township, Van Buren Township and all county courts.

A solemn Requiem Mass will be said at St. John's Catholic Church on Monday at noon for President Kennedy. The Rev. Msgr. Lawrence F. Graven will officiate.

The Rev. Robert P. Ward, president of the Ypsilanti Ministerial Association, said most other churches will not hold special services on Monday, but will include memorial rites in services tomorrow.

No decision was available as of this afternoon on whether area schools and industries would close part or all of Monday.

Flags were put at half-staff and public offices were closed as soon as the word of the assassination was received yesterday.

Mayor John Calder said, "It's a terrible tragedy. This is the worst thing that ever happened to our nation since the assassination of President Lincoln." He called on citizens to put flags at half staff and asked them "to attend the churches of their faith Sunday to pray for our country."

"I certainly hope that all will cooperate and work together until times are back to normal," Mayor Calder added. He stressed need to give full support to the new President.

Ypsilanti township offices were also closed as soon as the shocking news was received. "This is a terrible thing to have happened to the United States."

The Lions Travel Series will be canceled tonight and rescheduled at latter date. Adv.

Ypsilanti stopped, hesitated and then went on dazed and faltering yesterday as word of the President's death spread rapidly on the streets, offices, factories and schools.

"It can't be true," was the first reaction of most people and then the awful realization hit. Many cried and then prayed.

Others just shook their heads and spoke softly, still disbelieving. Then they slowly went on about their business.

Most elementary schools were closed for teachers conferences; other schools near the end of their day stayed in session after relaying word to the students; work continued slowly at factories.

People tried to finish out the day as best they could.

The general reaction of workers in area Ford plants was a combination of shock, disgust and disbelief.

Rest home burns, 65 believed dead

Blaze is second tragedy for aged

NORWALK (UPI) — Sixty-five elderly men and women perished in a rural rest home fire today in the worst fire in this country since 95 persons died in a Chicago school fire in 1958.

State Fire Marshal Fred Rice said there were 86 residents and three employees in the Golden Age Nursing Home 10 miles from here and "65 didn't get out."

Rice, after an on-the-spot inspection with Gov. James A. Rhodes, confirmed that three employees and only 21 of the elderly residents, many of them invalids, escaped from the one-story building which quickly became an inferno as winds whipped through the structure.

The tragedy was the second disastrous rest home fire in the United States this week. On Monday, 26 elderly persons died in a fire at the Surfside Hotel in Atlantic City, N.J., a resort hotel used as a convalescent home in the off-season.

The Chicago school fire on Dec. 1, 1958, claimed 95 lives. The tragedy, however, was far from the worst in Ohio's history, three fires each having claimed more than 100 lives. A fire at the Ohio Penitentiary on April 21, 1930, killed 320.

"This is the most devastating thing I have ever seen," the governor said as he looked at the smoldering ruins which disclosed an occasional charred skull and piece of human flesh.

Rhodes ordered all assistance at the state's command made available and then flew to Washington to join other officials in paying their respects to the slain President Kennedy this afternoon.

Rhodes ordered a complete investigation of the tragedy by.

Then Johnson, looking somewhat ashenfaced, came down the ramp, accompanied by Mrs. Johnson. She was clad in beige — nobody had had time to change to mourning clothes.

Walking to waiting microphones, Johnson read his statement: "This is a sad time for all people. We have suffered a loss that cannot be weighed. For the Highway Patrol under Capt. A. B. Cook.

Robert Pollack, president of the Cleveland firm which owned the rest home, said the building and operation had recently been approved by the state and the Health Department. He said it was cited for an "efficient, clean, safe nursing home."

About half of the elderly patients came from Cleveland and Cuyahoga County, Pollack said. A number of the residents were transferred here from the Cleveland State Hospital about a year ago.

The grim task of identifying the charred remains began shortly before noon. Officials said identification would be difficult and mostly through teeth and dentures and from charts showing the beds assigned for each resident.

LEE HARVEY OSWALD charged with assassination for distribution to others.

There was no immediate explanation from police as to what the paraffin tests would have shown since Oswald fired at least one shot in the slaying of a patrolman and attempted a second shot when arrested. A rifle was used to slay the President.

This development could pose the question of whether Connally — rather than Kennedy — might have been the primary target if the government's charge that Oswald did the shooting is sustained.

Dallas Police Chief Jesse Curry said today the police never had Oswald listed on their suspicious list. "We have another man working in that same building who has been listed in our subversive files since 1955," Curry said. Police were seeking this man for questioning.

Oswald, charged Friday night with murdering the President, insisted he is not the assassin. But an officer said today, "I think we got some good results from the paraffin test on both Oswald's hands."

Curry said there are 25 to 30 known Communists in the Dallas area.

Curry told newsmen the FBI had interviewed Oswald "a week or two ago."

Asked if the FBI notified police of Oswald's presence, the chief said "No, sir. They did not."

"Why they hadn't gotten around to informing us of this man, we don't know," Curry said.

He said the FBI told him of the interview Friday night after Oswald was in custody. Curry said the FBI agents did not reveal what information they had learned from their interview, or if the interview indicated he was a person to watch.

Curry said, "I think his actual target was the President. I say this because he hit the President twice from about a 75-yard distance on a slant, and apparently he was an expert marksman."

Curry said police found Communist literature in Oswald's apartment. He said he believed the material was for Oswald's own reading purposes and not

Brown said he has great faith in paraffin tests.

Deputy Police Chief M. W. Stevenson said Oswald was arraigned late Friday night on a charge of murdering the President. He earlier was charged with killing a policeman.

Johnson was dedicated Kennedy team man

Had President's high esteem

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyndon B. Johnson, coming into the presidency on the assassination death Friday of John F. Kennedy, had Kennedy's high esteem and confidence.

From old political foes—with in the Democratic party—they became a close working team.

Johnson tried in 1960 for the presidential nomination. When Kennedy won, Johnson accepted second place on the Democratic ticket.

Accepting, too, the Kennedy leadership he became extraordinarily active in behalf of the Kennedy policies. This activity included work for the civil rights program Kennedy laid down—something that lessened Johnson's popularity in the South—and there was some talk this year that Johnson might be dumped from the ticket next year.

But on Oct. 31, Kennedy was asked whether, if he ran next year, he would again want Johnson as the vice-presidential nominee, and whether he expected Johnson to be on the ticket.

"Yes, to both of these questions. That is correct," Kennedy replied.

Johnson is a former Democratic senator from Texas, best known for the vigorous, aggressive way he handled the job of Democratic leader of the Senate.

What direction may the Johnson administration take?

In one of the numerous speeches he made in recent years—this one in Washington on April 26—Johnson offered a broad view of what he thought the Democrats should attempt in next year's presidential campaign and thereafter.

He said the Democrats must demonstrate that they are a party of action, offering solutions for the new kinds of problems brought about by population increases and concentration, and by the lengthening of life expectancy.

"We have new capacities. We have new potentials. We stand at the edge of a new era of human progress in our own country and in the world," he said.

"At this decisive moment of opportunity, the party of the opposition offers only the slogan 'America cannot do it—America cannot afford the programs that we need!'"

He called for a full and enthusiastic support of Democrats everywhere for Kennedy's foreign and domestic programs.

"The American majority is constructive—and our party today is serving that constructiveness," he said.

Johnson, 55, suffered a heart attack in 1955 but came back and is one of the most vigorous politicians ever on the Washington scene.

As Senate majority leader, he was all over the political picture, but some thought he would have to slow down when he became vice president—ordinarily just a ceremonial job.

But he took on so many chores he needed three offices from which to operate—in the Capitol, in the new Senate office building and in the White House. He kept 17 staffers hopping.

At 6 feet 3, weighing close to 200 pounds, Johnson has always been supercharged with energy. He has been called self-centered and considerate; a humanitarian and power-hungry; a shrewd opportunist and a political genius; tough and yet vulnerable; vain, friendly, sensitive, flamboyant.

Friends and others who watched him on his rise over the decades agreed that he was just flexible enough, or human enough, to have been all of those things at one time or another.

Johnson once said of himself: "I am a free man, an American, a United States senator, and a Democrat, in that order."

"I am also a liberal, a conservative, a Texan, a taxpayer, a rancher, a businessman, a consumer, a parent, a voter, and not as young as I used to be nor as old as I expect to be—and I am all those things in no fixed order."

Arthur Edson, Associated Press writer, who has specialized in politics and personalities once commented that a person's opinion of Johnson would be swayed by where that person met him. He wrote, on the basis of personal knowledge of Johnson in all his phases:

"There's Johnson in the Senate, buttonholing a colleague, talking, cajoling, arguing, persuading. He usually knows who's for and who's against him on almost every issue, and he quickly moves in and tries to convince those who are not on his side."

"Johnson isn't the world's greatest speaker. He is at his best when speaking casually and humorously. He's at his worst when he is reading a carefully prepared text."

Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon was once asked about Johnson. He replied, "You should never count Lyndon out. He is one of the ablest political craftsmen of our time."

LYNDON B. JOHNSON QUICKLY SWEORN AS PRESIDENT

Nation faces gradual changes under new leadership of 'a conservative'

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — A stunned nation faced today a gradual but perceptible change of course under its new President, Lyndon B. Johnson.

Johnson can be expected to continue the international policies of John F. Kennedy, which has said repeatedly he put the Communists on the defensive by giving the non-Communist world the initiative.

But domestically, a reorientation of policies and of political actions appears inevitable.

Labels always are inadequate to describe the complexities of political beliefs. But the assassinated Kennedy was basically liberal and his successor is fundamentally conservative.

This puts an entirely new complexion on the 1964 presidential contest, if Johnson is the Democratic nominee as he seems surely to become.

Instead of facing the certainty that he will be opposing a Democrat who leaned toward the left and whose personal popularity seemed likely to remain high,

Republicans will have the alternative of picking a candidate to contest a man whose roots reach deep in the conservative South but who has come around to espousing civil rights and almost every liberal cause.

This could be disappointing to the supporters of Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who counted heavily on their man's outspoken opposition to Kennedy's policies and Goldwater's conservative stance to win the Republican nomination for him.

It could lift the hopes of New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller in his self-designated underdog fight for the GOP nomination. Rockefeller could cite a long and consistent record of civil rights against Johnson's come-lately declarations for equal opportunity.

By and large, the passing of Kennedy could go a long way to remove the psychological fear of the Republicans that a President seeking a second term would be nearly unbeatable. This could result in a blossoming of other candidates such as Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania and Gov. George Romney of Michigan.

Courageous Jackie must find words to tell children their daddy is dead

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A grief-torn young mother must find the words to tell her two small children that their daddy is dead.

Mrs. Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy, her emotions hidden behind a mask of courage, returned today to the White House that she left only two days ago as the happy First Lady of the land.

Waiting for her were her daughter Caroline and her son John Jr. They also will be waiting for their father, President John F. Kennedy, who will not return.

John-John, as he was nicknamed by his father, will be 3 years old Monday, the day of Kennedy's funeral. Caroline will be 6 on Wednesday.

The two children adored their father and his deep affection for them captured the nation's imagination. He showed it all the time, even while carrying out his official duties.

The children were asleep at the White House Friday night when their daddy came home for the last time. Mrs. Kennedy had kept vigil at Bethesda Naval Hospital where the President's body was taken on arrival from Dallas, Tex.

With her was Dr. John W. Walsh, her obstetrician and close friend who saw her through the tragedy of the death of her infant son, Patrick Bouvier Kennedy on Aug. 9.

Also by her side was Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy who went to the hospital at her request. The attorney general raced up the ramp when the presidential plane arrived and took Mrs.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy was assassinated two years, 10 months and two days after he assumed the nation's highest office on Jan. 20, 1961. He had been elected President on Nov. 8, 1960—three years, 14 days before his death.

Mrs. Johnson went to Mrs. Kennedy at the hospital and put her arms around her. In despair Mrs. Johnson uttered: "I wish to God there was something I could do."

Mrs. Kennedy pulled herself together and watched as Lyndon B. Johnson took the oath of office as the new president in the presidential plane in Dallas, and then kissed her on the cheek.

She stood for a moment, staring at the floor, fighting back the tears. Dallas Police Chief J. E. Currey went up to her took her hand, and said, "God bless you, little lady. Don't you want to go back and lie down?"

"No, thanks," she said in a firm voice, "I'm fine, really." Then she went to an alcove of the plane and remained seated near the body.

At the Dallas hospital, she moaned softly, "Whatever are we going to do. Whatever are we going to do?"

John F. Kennedy--bullet ends calls to face crises

John F. Kennedy
35th President
born May 29, 1917

By The Associated Press

John Fitzgerald Kennedy, 35th President of the United States, was the first American chief executive to face the possibility of nuclear war and to risk it with a show of force to protect American interests. But later he succeeded in achieving an accord with Russia limiting nuclear tests.

Domestically, he was confronted by a racial problem that epitomized a contemporary world issue—the relationship between the black and white races.

There were foreign problems old and new during his administration. Inherited from previous administrations was the Cold War with Soviet Russia.

Despite Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's determination to rid West Berlin of Allied occupation troops, Kennedy held American forces there. He kept American troops in Southeast Asia to thwart Communist penetration in that area. Through economic help he sought to aid Latin America, a target of propaganda from Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro, avowed disciple of Khrushchev. And he acted in similar fashion in Africa where newly emerged nations groped their way unsteadily toward stability, often with violence.

In Europe there was the problem of keeping the North Atlantic Treaty Organization intact—a problem enlarged by French President de Gaulle's announced intention not to take direction or protection from the United States.

At home, in addition to the integration crisis, Kennedy became embroiled with the steel industry over a price increase which he halted, faced a nationwide railroad strike which resulted in Congressional action, fought for a tax cut which he called necessary to spur the economy and to avoid a possible recession and watched avidly the United States race into space with the Russians.

The nuclear crisis broke in the waning months of his second year in office when he confronted Premier Khrushchev with a demand to remove Russian missiles set up in Cuba and pointing at the United States 90 miles away.

Quarantine ordered

Kennedy ordered a naval quarantine on such offensive weapons being sent to the island nation, said ships carrying them would be turned back and called on Khrushchev to withdraw the weapons already there.

For five days the nation and the world waited for word from Khrushchev, sworn foe of the Free World. On Sunday, Oct. 28, 1962 came intense relief. Khrushchev announced he had ordered work stopped on missile bases, said the missiles would be crated and returned to Russia and promised that the United Nations would verify the dismantling.

The crisis involving Cuba was not Kennedy's first with that small Caribbean nation.

Soon after he was inaugurated Jan. 20, 1961 Cuban refugees with United States backing invaded their homeland in an attempt to wrest it from Castro. The invasion was a fiasco. Castro's Russian-built military might crushed the invasion. Anticipated defections from Castro's forces failed to materialize. And the United States did not come to the invaders' aid militarily. U.S. prestige abroad plummeted.

While the invasion was in progress Khrushchev warned Kennedy to "call a halt to the aggression" or else Russia would give "all necessary assistance" in resisting the invasion. But the President replied:

"In the event of any military intervention by outside force, we will immediately honor our obligations under the inter-American system to protect this hemisphere against external aggression."

Later, in a speech, Kennedy warned Communist foes and non-Communist friends that the United States would act on its own against Cuba's Reds if United States security was threatened. This is what he did in October, 1962.

The nation's first inkling came Sunday, Oct. 21. There were reports of tension in Washington, but newsmen were unable to pin down the cause.

On Monday it was announced Kennedy would address the nation at 7 p.m. on a matter of greatest urgency. Meanwhile, it was learned that congressional leaders had been summoned back to the capital.

At the appointed hour a serious, stern President could be seen on the television screen.

Without wasting words he outlined evidence of atomic missile sites in Cuba. He blamed Soviet Russia, which had been assuring the United States it was sending only defensive weapons to the island. Said Kennedy:

"This secret, swift and extraordinary build-up of Communist missiles in an area well known to have a special and historical relationship to the United States and the nations of the Western Hemisphere is a deliberately provocative and unjustified change in the status quo which cannot be accepted by this country, if our courage and our commitments are ever again to be trusted by either friend or foe."

Twenty-five Russian ships were reported en route to Cuba.

Meanwhile, United Nations

Acting Secretary General U Thant asked both Kennedy and Khrushchev to suspend both the arms blockade and arms shipment for two or three weeks pending negotiations. Khrushchev accepted. Washington agreed to cooperate to avoid a confrontation.

Twenty hours after the proclamation was issued a Russian ship carrying oil was intercepted. It was allowed to proceed.

Tension mounted. The Kremlin stalled. On Friday, Oct. 26, the State Department called attention to the President's speech in which he said if missile site preparation continued "further action will be justified."

At 9 p.m. that night a letter arrived from Khrushchev. Although not explicitly stated, it contained an offer to withdraw the offensive weapons under U.N. supervision in return for a guarantee the United States would not invade Cuba. The following day—Saturday—a second note from Russia offered to trade Cuba bases for U.S. bases in Turkey.

The United States, parrying the Turkey bid, advised Khrushchev that if he was offering to remove offensive weapons for an end to the blockade and a U.S. promise not to invade Cuba, it was a deal. Khrushchev's fateful message came the next day. He agreed.

But the crisis still was unsolved. Castro, thrust in the background during the tension-filled days, announced he would not permit U.N. on-the-spot inspection. A visit from U Thant failed to budge him. Russian First Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan flew to Cuba and turned over access to West Berlin to the East German Communist government. The East Germans whom the Western powers did not recognize, said the city should be theirs.

But it wasn't.

Never again should a President be permitted to so expose himself to a potential fanatic. To protect him in such circumstances, even for the finest secret service agents, is impossible.

We admit the imperative and legitimate demands of politics. But the vested interest of all the people in their President far outweighs that.

It's quite an experience for a little fella when

A first haircut is rough on any fella—especially when he's 2 years old and has curly hair that's some four inches long. That was the ordeal in store for little Gregory Day, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Day of 2418 Washtenaw Ave. Accompanied by his mother—"who couldn't get up the courage until now to cut Gregory's cute long hair"—and his big brother, Jeffery, 4, he went to the Ecorse Rd. Barbershop this week for his first try at the barber chair. After Mom gave he takes to the barber's chair for the first time his curly locks a last brushing (left), he settled into the barber chair for a first look at the clippers and the barber, Jerry Grzeski of Belleville (second from left). The buzz of the clippers was more than Gregory could take (second from right) and he let out a yell that startled customers in the other barber chairs. But, alas, Gregory decided he likes looking like a little boy right, especially when he's rewarded with a big cherry lollipop!

News

At the Ypsilanti plant the first news was received by the plant's industrial relations manager who passed it on to the acting plant manager and employees were soon turning on radios to hear the news. The flag in front of the plant was lowered to half staff as soon as the news was received.

Workers heard the news in muted silence at area General Motors plants. All three plants, Hydra-matic, Fisher Body and Corvair, were scheduled to operate as usual today.

James E. Tobias, Corvair plant manager heard the news of the president being wounded over the radio and relayed it immediately to plant workers over the intercommunication system.

Production did not cease, but talk among the assembly plant workers diminished to a hush. The switchboard was jammed immediately as wives called to inform husbands of the news.

At the Fisher Body plant, word of the tragedy was heard over a radio in the plant protection department, and relayed by word-of-mouth among the workers.

A General Motors spokesman at Hydra-matic reported the same general reaction among plant workers.

The "New Frontier" — junior and senior high school students — sat in their classrooms and heard that their President had died.

Elementary students in the Ypsilanti Public School System were off because of teacher's conferences.

Some 2,000 Eastern Michigan University students who were in Bowen Field House registering for the second semester heard of the President's death over the public address system.

We are shocked and appalled at the loss of this great statesman who was needed and looked to for guidance during these crucial times. Pistol bullet hits both

Two small children were shot about 11 a.m. today while playing with their father's .22 caliber magnum pistol, police said.

A single bullet creased the abdomen of Douglas K. Dye, Jr., 2½, and lodged in the lower right leg of his sister's Kima Lee, 3½.

The two, children of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Dye of 1000 Hunter Ave., were taken by ambulance to Beyer Memorial Hospital. Their conditions were not believed serious.

Mrs. Dye told Washtenaw sheriff's deputies that she was in her baby's bedroom when she heard a shot in her bedroom. She said she ran into the room and found both children crying and bleeding.

Deputies said the pistol, loaded with three bullets, apparently was removed from the parent's bed-headboard by one of the children. It could not be immediately determined which child was holding the gun when it fired.

A pile of colorfully wrapped gifts under the tree is a decorative and tantalizing sight.

Packages in bright red and green wrappings; mysterious-looking packages, odd-shaped and interesting packages that rattle when shaken, these are all part of the excitement of Christmas.

Wrapping gifts imaginatively is a big part of the fun of Christmas. You can find unusual and inexpensive gift wrap ideas around the house...especially in your sewing room.

Fabric scraps—anything from velveteen to calico—make excellent wrapping material, as do cotton terry cloth towels, or sheets of decorative Christmas tree cotton. To tie up packages, there's colored yarn, bias tape, lace, or cotton rick-rack.

A variety of original package trims—wreaths, candy canes, trees—can be created with rick-rack. Form an attractive Christmas tree with rows of green rick-rack in graduated lengths. Glue on colored sequins for tree ornaments, and use bias tape for the trunk and base.

To please a lady of any age, fashion a very special present with frostings of ruffles and lace. Trim a velveteen-wrapped package with white cotton lace, eyelet ruffles, bands of cotton embroidery, or frilly organdy appliques.

For a devotee of early Americana, use lengths of red calico or a gay provincial print as gift wrappings. Tie up the package with heavy twine, and decorate with an arrangement of pine sprays and pine cones.

Gifts for the kitchen might be practical, but they also can be the prettiest packages under the tree. Use cotton dish towels in colorful prints for wrapping, and tuck small kitchen accessories in the bow arrangement. Decorate a gift wrapped in white tissue paper with a set of red cotton terry cloth pot-holders. Or use red shelf paper for wrapping, and pin on a doll-size apron cut from a small-figured red cotton print.

If the gift is for the bath—fragrant soap or bath salts—wrap it in a cotton terry cloth hand towel. You might package a towel set in a matching floral-printed bath towel. Decorate with an arrangement of artificial flowers.

Since a child is eager to tear off the wrappings and see what's inside, the simpler the wrappings for a child's gift the better. Why not use the color edition of the comics, and tie up with strands of red and green cotton yarn. Or wrap in plain tissue paper, and tie with a red jump rope that has jingle bells attached to handles.

If there's a baby on your Christmas list, delight the mother by wrapping his gift in one of the new cotton stretch diapers. Fasten with colored diaper pins, and use pink or blue bias tape for tying.

Whatever materials you use for wrapping gifts, remember that the personal touch is the ingredient that makes giving a fine art. Wrap each gift with imagination, to suit the contents or the person who receives it, and you'll add an extra measure of thoughtfulness to the simplest present.

One night my husband took a piece of wire screening (left over from repairing), cut it the same size as our floor openings and wired this to each grate on the bottom side of the cover itself.

Heloise, it's absolutely wonderful. Not only does it keep items from falling into the cavity of the heater but it also catches all of the dust which used to land in the heating unit.

Once in a while, all we have to do is unwire the piece of screen, hold it under our kitchen faucet upside down, and spray the accumulated dust off the screen. Sure saves us a mess.

Lincoln cagers see tough race in Huron League

By BASIL STEVENS
Press Sports Editor

The Huron League's basketball race this season should be quite a tussle, with seven of the conference's eight teams having a lot to say about who will eventually succeed defending champion Tecumseh.

And Lincoln coach Bert McMahon isn't taking any chances with his team suffering from that fourth quarter drop that plagued the Rail-splitters last season.

McMahon, starting his second season as head coach, can floor the best team Lincoln has had in the five seasons he has been associated with the Rail-splitters.

Most impressive is the Rail-splitters front line of 6-3 Herb Wright and Ron Porter and Bob Russell, both of whom measure 6-2. The threesome can shoot with the best in the league, which they proved last winter. Two other lettermen are on hand to help man the guard posts. They are Keith Talladay, who still is suffering from the aftereffects of a football foot injury, and Jim Walters. Both reach to the six-foot level.

However, David Criss and Howard Majtyka may step in as the ball handlers.

Bill Borgstad and Ron Gilman will be other key performers for McMahon's cage team.

Lincoln, which several times saw leads slip away in the last period last season, won only five of its 17 games a year ago. Three of those wins came in Huron League play.

The Rail-splitters get the jump on most of the area's other teams next week. They open Monday with a nonconference home game against Roosevelt before starting their Huron League schedule at home against Flat Rock Wednesday.

Lincoln's schedule:

Nov. 25—Roosevelt
27—Flat Rock-x
Dec. 1— at Carleton Airport-x
Dec. 13—Saline-x
Dec. 20—Milan-x
Jan. 3—at Dundee-x

21 earn Lincoln grid letters

Lincoln football coach Tom McCormick has announced 21 varsity letterwinners for the Rail-splitters during the past season. Twelve of the monogram winners will be back next season.

Seniors: Ken Fulton, Howard Majtyka, Keith Richards, Robert (Mike) Downs, Dave Jones, Mike Searl, Larry Darling, Stu Hendricks, Walt Neuirth and John Tomlinson.

Underclassmen: Bill Borgstad, Keith Talladay, Dennis Crossley, Dave Kwiecinski, Roger Cox, Larry Scott, George Sheeks, Jim Walters, Allen Arndt, Bob Russell and Tom Cunningham.

Varsity reserve letterwinners: Donald Liss, Tom Marsh, Tom Briggs, Don Uchman, Dave Ostrowski, Ed Berline, Bill Boatwright, Bob Blumhardt and George Strasburg.

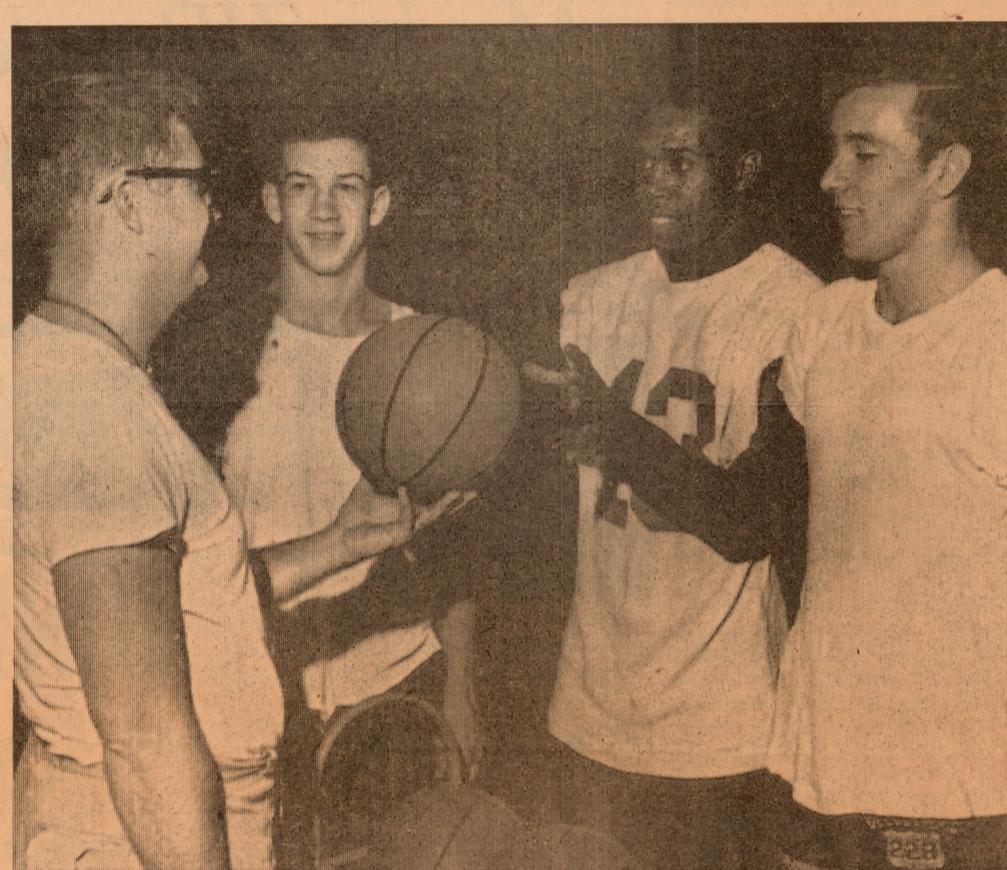

Hurons tie for 5th spot in all-sports

Eastern Michigan, handicapped because of playing an independent football schedule and not fielding a soccer team, is tied for fifth place in the Presidents' Athletic Conference all-sports title race.

The Hurons, PAC cross country champions, accounted for all nine of their points in the harrier sport.

Defending all-sports champion Wayne State and Thiel share first place with 13 points. Wayne State was second in cross country and fourth in football. Thiel was third in both sports.

Soccer champion Allegheny is third with 11 points. Football champion John Carroll is fourth with 9½ points. Case Tech is tied with Eastern with nine points, followed by Washington & Jefferson and Bethany with 8½ points each and Western Reserve with 5½ points.

Tiger five lacks size, experience

BELLEVILLE — Coach Marland Howard doesn't have to use many fingers—only three—if he wants to count either the lettermen or the six-footers on his Belleville basketball team this season.

And he wouldn't have to go to much bother to field a team without as much as one six-foot players on the floor—a rarity for a Class A high school team.

Forwards Bob Mercer and Ron Van Pelt, both of whom are 5-11, and 5-10 guard Joe Bechtel are the three veterans. All are seniors and should be starters when Belleville kicks off its season with a non-league game at Dearborn Fordson Tuesday.

But after those three, the scramble is on. Howard still is undecided upon the other two members of his starting line-up.

Bill Cabana, a 5-11 junior guard, has the inside track for one job. Two of the six-footers—6-1 Rodney Hall and six-foot Ken LaCross—and 5-11 Tom Fielder are in contention.

With Fielder in the line-up, the Tigers would be without a player as tall as six feet. However, four of the five would be 5-11.

Rounding out the squad are Carl Cullin, a 6-2 junior and the tallest player on the team, 5-10 Joe Tingler and 5-8 Preston Harries.

"We're green and short," says Howard, who last season guided Belleville to a 9-8 record and a berth in the district finals. But gone are last season's five starters.

"Look for a turnaround in the standings," says Howard of the Suburban Six League race. Trenton and Plymouth were on the bottom last year, but have several lettermen returning. Then too, Redford Union and Livonia Bentley are always tough.

Belleville's first home game will be a nonleague encounter against Wayne Memorial Dec. 6.

Basketball drills with movies

Transfer students bolster Roosevelt basketball team

Ron Saunders, who will debut as Roosevelt's head basketball coach Monday night when the Rough Riders open their cage season at Lincoln, might be compared to a chef creating a new stew.

Whereas a chef creates his stew by using an ingredient of this, another of that and still another of something else, Saunders is forming what he expects to be a better than average basketball team with three returning lettermen, a cager from Lincoln, another from Milan and still another from Detroit.

The latter three are transfer students to Roosevelt this year.

Mike Pear, a 6-3 senior, is the only veteran returning for duty in the front line. Pear will be one of the two forwards. Jim Herndon, the Rough Riders second high scorer as a forward last year, will move back to a guard post with Jeff Richards, the third letterman.

Jack Richards — no relation — will start at the other forward post. He is a six-foot junior transfer from Lincoln. Don Randall, a 6-3 center and transfer from Detroit Southwestern, will handle the rebounding chores.

The third transfer cager is Tom Bodie, however he will not be eligible until the second semester when the going becomes much more serious. He is a 6-2 senior forward from Milan. His parents still live there, causing Bodie's ineligibility.

"We should be able to almost double our scoring power of last season," says Saunders. The Rough Riders last year averaged only 43 points a game, due mainly to their lack of height necessary for adequate rebounding. Saunders expects Randall, aided by Pear and Richards, to take care of the rebounding in a much stronger fashion this year.

Mark Sundquist, a 6-2 forward, and Al Burrell, a 5-11 guard, are the top replacements.

Bill Wales, Eric Walline and Gary Perry are a trio of promising sophomores who will see plenty of action.

Kip Swihart, Jim Sukach and Bill Sinkule round out the squad.

Roosevelt posted a 3-13 record last fall, including a 2-10 record good for a sixth place finish in the Washtenaw Conference.

Although the Rough Riders scoring average was the lowest of the area high school teams, they also had the best defensive average of only 52.6 points a game against them.

Ford joins elite group affiliated with pro football ownership

By MELVIN DURSLAG
(Press Special Correspondent)

The original affliction was described as only minor with William Clay Ford, a Yale man who specialized in soccer and tennis and went from there to a momma and poppa business the family owns at Willow Run.

The son of Edsel Ford and Grandson of Henry, Bill had purchased 2 per cent of the Detroit Lions mostly for giggles.

Soon, his interest in the team expanded. He started to make road trips. On the day of the games, his appetite strangely vanished. He forgot the names of his wife and children. The malady had spread and the poor man was hooked, irretrievably.

It is not surprising that his condition should lead to a bid on his part of $6 million for the Lions, an offer which doubtless will be accepted.

In Philadelphia, a sale price of $4.5 million had been placed on the Eagles, with a wealthy Miamian, George Storer, negotiating for the franchise. Storer also owns a Detroit television station.

Why are men otherwise prudent in business affairs willing to pay such unreasonable prices for pro football teams and how costly will it eventually become to indulge this hobby?

We brought up the matter recently with the champion patsy of the National League, Daniel Reeves, who bought the Los Angeles Rams last winter for $7.1 million.

Actually, Reeves didn't pay that much, since he already owned a third of the stock. But his purchase of the other two-thirds was based on that figure.

"The prices we are paying for franchises these days are ridiculous," admits Reeves. "They violate every logical rule of investment on the basis of earnings. But the price is dictated by supply and demand. There are only 14 national league franchises in a very large country, and there happens to be a demand for all of them."

Viewing dispassionately the positive and negative aspects of buying a pro football franchise, Reeves points out:

"You have on the positive side certain possibilities in television and pay TV. You also are getting a running business with valuable players, and you are buying not only your club, but the Browns and Packers and Bears and all the others in the league which contribute to your earnings."

"On the negative side, there is limited growth to pro football. You can play just so many games a year and you can get just so much for tickets."

"You also are investing in a business which rises or falls in seven days. (The number of home dates for each team). Bad weather on those days can ruin your whole year."

"Obviously, pro football is not for widows and orphans. It is a risky proposition for people like the Fords who needn't worry about getting back their investment within their lifetime."

Reeves bought the Rams in 1941 for $125,000. Today, one can pay almost that much to a rookie quarterback in bonus and a three-year contract.

Since the earnings of the Lions have been greater than those of the Rams, why would the Detroit Franchise sell for less than Los Angeles?"

"We paid for potential," explains Reeves. "We have population growth in Los Angeles. We have a big break in the weather and we also have the largest radio market in the country. The clubs divide their TV money, but each makes a private deal for radio."

At the time Reeves was bidding for the Rams last winter, he also had submitted an offer quietly to buy the Eagles in the event the Los Angeles franchise had gone to the Edwin Pauley group. When he got the Rams, Reeves withdrew his Philadelphia offer.

The deal for the Eagles right now has been jammed by a clause in the National League constitution which forbids ownership of a club by a company engaged in another business.

For private reasons, presumably pertaining to taxes, Storer is trying to manipulate the purchase of the club by a radio station he owns. He is willing to meet the sale price of $4.5 million, but the league insists that the club be bought independently.

The mania for owning pro football franchises at outlandish prices probably started three years ago when a young promoter from New York named Arthur Modell purchased the Cleveland Browns for the then staggering price of $3.9 million.

Not a wealthy man, but one of certain means, Modell took in minority partners and also managed a $2 million loan from the banks.

Thus, he exposed himself to a life of anguish and suspense. Each Saturday, some 24 hours before his games in Cleveland, Modell goes on the weather watch. Every hour, he telephones the meteorological station for forecasts, sweating out climate in the arctic zones of northern Ohio.

By the time the Browns even appear on the field for the game, Modell is an emotional wreck. This is the kind of misery for which prospective National League owners are willing to pay exorbitant sums. As Reeves points out:

"Two things happen when a man gets involved with a franchise. First, he gets hooked on the sport, which leads to the second item — He gets hooked on the deal."

Many games called off

Sports world stilled by Kennedy's death

EAST LANSING (AP) — The Michigan State-Illinois Big Ten championship football game was postponed today and will be played here next Thursday on Thanksgiving Day at 1:30 p.m. Announcement of the postponement came from the office of MSU President John Hannah.

ANN ARBOR — Today's Michigan - Ohio State Big Ten football game has been canceled because of the death of President John F. Kennedy. The University of Michigan announced the cancellation shortly after 9 a.m. The cancellation was announced by Michigan President Harlan Hatcher.

Dr. Hatcher issued a statement saying:

"President Harlan Hatcher and President Novice G. Fawcett of Ohio State have announced that in solemn recognition of the great national tragedy today's game between the University of Michigan and Ohio State University will not be played."

By JIM BECKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The sounds of sports crowds were stilled today in memory of a vigorous, sports-loving President.

Dozens of big Saturday football games were canceled. A few others were still scheduled to be played because the people in charge said they felt that President Kennedy would have wanted it.

But half-time shows were replaced with memorial services for the slain President.

All national television sports programs were canceled today and Sunday.

The annual Yale - Harvard game was one of the first to be postponed. It may be played Nov. 30. The late President played junior varsity football at Harvard.

Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick spoke for sports when he said:

"We all feel a deep loss and at the same time a great sense of shame and unhappiness that this should happen in our country. We are all shocked and in sorrow."

Friday almost all sports events were canceled or postponed after word was received of the President's death.

Most basketball and hockey games were not played. The national television fight was canceled.

Night racing was called off. Most tracks will stay closed until Wednesday.

Only Pimlico and Golden Gate were scheduled to operate.

Golfers in the Cajun Classic Tournament at Lafayette, La., played badly and said they didn't care. Today's third round was postponed a day.

North Carolina State beat Wake Forest 42-0 Friday night at Raleigh, N.C., after John T. Caldwell, chancellor at N.C. State said he "deeply believed that President Kennedy would have wished the game to go on."

Saturday football cancellations poured in throughout the night.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association left it to the colleges involved to do as they saw fit.

Only the Southeastern Conference offered a complete schedule. Most other schools cancelled or postponed their games.

The Southeastern games were: Florida State at Auburn, Tennessee at Kentucky, Tulane at Louisiana State and Florida at Miami.

Boosters Club moves into winter schedule

The Ypsilanti Boosters Club, after a one-week layoff for a between season stretch, next week swings into the winter sports portion of its weekly Tuesday noon meetings at the Huron Hotel.

The meeting next Tuesday will be more of an organizational luncheon for the winter seasons, according to honorary chairman Ed Shadford, since only two of the five Ypsilanti high schools will have played by that time. Roosevelt and Lincoln are scheduled to clash in basketball Monday night.

E. L. (Bud) Abbott is urging all persons who purchased a Boosters Club ticket during football season to attend Tuesday. A total of 111 tickets have been reportedly sold.

Networks cancel entertainment shows

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's three major television and radio networks scrapped all commercials and entertainment programs out of respect for the death Friday of President Kennedy.

The National Broadcasting Co., American Broadcasting Co., and Columbia Broadcasting System all said they would devote their entire network radio and television programs to news of the assassination and all allied incidents.

The Mutual Broadcasting system said it would ban commercials and entertainment features on its radio network until after the President's funeral.

ABC said its commercial and entertainment ban would remain in effect indefinitely. NBC said it would observe the commercial and entertainment blackout until "sometime Saturday night."

CBS said it would not return commercials or entertainment programs to its network until after the President's burial.

All networks said they would continue broadcasts on radio and television through Friday night.

Death shocks world

The faces of these two Ypsilanti residents reflect the stunned disbelief of persons throughout the nation and world yesterday as they learned of the assassination of President Kennedy. They stopped on a downtown street corner to read of the President's sudden, shocking death.

World is numbed by news of death

By The Associated Press

Word of President Kennedy's assassination struck the world's capitals with shattering impact, leaving heads of state and the man in the street stunned and grief-stricken.

While messages of condolence poured into the White House from presidents, premiers and crowned heads, the little people of many lands reacted with momentary disbelief.

Pub in London and cafes in Paris fell silent, as the news came over radio and television. In Moscow, a Russian girl walked weeping along the street. At U.N. headquarters in New York, delegates of 111 nations bowed their heads in a moment of silence.

In Buenos Aires, newspapers sounded sirens reserved for news of the utmost gravity.

Britain's Prime Minister Douglas-Home sent condolences and Sir Winston Churchill branded the slaying a monstrous act.

"The loss to the United States and to the world is incalculable," Sir Winston declared. "Those who come after Mr. Kennedy must strive the more to achieve the ideals of world peace and human happiness and dignity to which his presidency was dedicated."

Douglas-Home issued this terse statement: "The prime minister has learned with the most profound shock and horror of the death by assassination of the President of the United States."

A tribute also came from Harold Wilson, leader of Britain's Labor party.

"I pay tribute to one who has been a good friend of this country, a great world statesman and a great fighter for peace," Wilson said.

France's President Charles de Gaulle issued a brief tribute: "President Kennedy died like a soldier, under fire, for his duty and in the service of his country. In the name of the French people, a friend always of the American people, I salute this great example and this great memory."

In the Soviet Union, Moscow radio broke into a broadcast to announce that the President had been shot. It then began playing funeral music.

Canada's House of Commons listened in silence at Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson announced in a voice choked with emotion: "I have just been informed that President Kennedy is dead."

Sorrowful nation stunned by death, united in grief

By The Associated Press

The assassination of President Kennedy Friday brought forth an outpouring of grief from men in high office across the land. Lament crossed party lines and differences.

Stunned almost into disbelief, they called for prayer.

In the words of Colorado Gov. John Love, a Republican, the President's death does "not call for words, but for sorrow."

Former President Harry S. Truman in Independence, Mo., the unharmed target of an assassination attempt 13 years ago, was too stunned for immediate comment.

In New York, two former presidents, Dwight D. Eisenhower and Herbert Hoover, issued statements of sorrow.

"I share the sense of shock and dismay that all Americans feel at the despicable act that resulted in the death of our nation's President," Eisenhower said.

Hoover commented: "He loved America and has given his life for his country. I join our bereaved nation in heartfelt sympathy to Mrs. Kennedy and their two children."

Flags were lowered to half-staff across the nation and business came to a standstill as Americans tried to express their grief.

Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, who lost the presidency to Kennedy, said: "The assassination of the President is a terrible tragedy for the nation. Mrs. Nixon and I have sent a personal message expressing our deepest sympathy to the members of the family in this hour of sorrow."

New York's Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, candidate for the Republican nomination for president, described the death of the man he had hoped to oppose as "a shocking and terrible tragedy for the nation and the world."

Rockefeller canceled a campaign trip to New Hampshire and said, "May God grant strength and guidance to Lyndon Johnson as he assumes his grave responsibilities under these tragic circumstances. The prayers of all of us will be with him."

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., a personal friend of Kennedy despite their divergent political views, said: "It is both shocking and dreadful that a thing like this could happen in a free country. The President's death is a profound loss to the nation and the free world."

From two Southern governors who bitterly opposed the President on civil rights came expressions of shock and dismay.

Alabama Gov. George Wallace said the assassin "must be filled with universal malice toward all."

He added: "It is hard to believe that anyone would shoot at the President of the United States. It is the same as if they had shot at you and me."

Courts were adjourned. Amusement places shut down.

Games were called off. Dinners were cancelled.

"He was such a young man, such a fine man," an old woman said, shaking her head sorrowfully, muttering to herself as she stood watching a printer outside New York's Associated Press Buildings.

A crowd stood there, and their mood was like that of crowds wherever they were, grief-stricken, incredulous, and often angry, bitterly angry, that it could have happened.

"It's as if we lived in a jungle," a housewife said.

U.S. Ambassador to South Vietnam Henry Cabot Lodge, en route to confer with the President, groped for words to express himself in San Francisco. A Massachusetts resident like the President, Lodge frequently had opposed Kennedy in political warfare.

"I was very fond of him and knew him intimately. Lately we have been particularly close because he followed — no not followed but guided — America's foreign policy," Lodge said.

In Rome, Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York described himself as "deeply grieved and shocked" by the death of America's first Roman Catholic president. "My prayers are now for President Kennedy," he said. The Vatican said Pope Paul VI prayed for the President's soul.

Country feels sick emptiness

By The Associated Press

Life couldn't be quite the same anymore. A good man, a great man in the eyes of millions, was gone. He meant something to everyone, whatever they thought of him. And he was gone. Things couldn't be quite as they were.

It was that way for a nation, even for the world.

It was that way for people, too, for ordinary citizens, who felt the sick emptiness, the helplessness, that death brings, especially the death of one who counted for so much to so many.

There were the usual words for it — shock... dismay... tears... heartache.

But there was more than that, for many, a kind of a stunned immobility, a desolation for which there were no words to utter, as if vocabulary and emotions could neither comprehend it entirely nor express it.

So much was at stake, so much had depended on him.

And it came so suddenly, so violently, so unexpectedly, this death of a young President, the end of this handsome, vigorous John F. Kennedy, with his dark shock of hair, his lively eyes and sharp mind. And it took something out of most everyone.

"I felt as if he was my brother," a New Haven, Conn., man said, a catch in his voice.

"But he was more than that—he was our President."

What happens now, with him shot dead? There will be another president, of course, but it won't be Kennedy, nor his plans, his ideals and manners, nor their reflection in the world's destiny, whether he loved him or hated him for what he was.

"I was more than that—he was our President."
